Midlands Plant & Flower Festival Set to Bloom

It's an annual event for gardeners and outdoor enthusiasts alike. The annual spring plant and flower festivals hosted by the South Carolina Department of Agriculture will be held at the three state farmers markets beginning with the Midlands Plant and Flower festival April 2-5 in Columbia.

Each year the Department holds three festivals at its markets in Columbia, Florence and Greenville. Admission and parking are always free, and these festivals are a highlight of the spring as thousands of visitors from all over the state make their way to the Markets looking for numerous varieties of horticultural and agricultural products for their home gardens. Because of the wide variety of plants, and lawn and garden décor for sale, visitors are encouraged to bring along a wagon or cart to carry their purchases. Comfortable shoes are always a must.

The festival is always a hit with both customers and vendors. At the 2008 Spring Plant and Flower Festival at the Columbia State Farmers Market Herbert Vinning, owner of Vinning's Nursery in Summerton, said he attends every year and does well enough to keep coming back. Last year was his sixth year at the Midlands Plant and Flower Festival and he plans on keeping the tradition going.

Jackie Moore, festival coordinator, said each year there is a fantastic turnout.

"There is always something for everyone at our Plant and Flower Festivals," Moore said. "I encourage anyone who is coming out to get there early and enjoy this great event."

Maxie Joye of Columbia said last year was her second time coming to the festival. Adding that she likes to come on Sunday and gets most of her plants for her yard at this one event. While at the Midlands Plant and Flower Festival she picked up lantana, geraniums, and azaleas.

Gardeners, grab your trowels – and let the gardening begin!

State Farmers Markets join Master Gardeners to Plant-A-Row for Harvest Hope

Gardening is one of America's favorite pastimes, but it can also be a rewarding and satisfying experience to know that the fruits of your labor can help provide nutritious food for the hungry.

The South Carolina Department of Agriculture has partnered with state's Master Gardener Associations in support of the Plant-A-Row for the Hungry campaign to benefit Harvest Hope Food Bank. In the 20 counties served by Harvest Hope, gardeners are asked to plant an extra row of vegetables and donate them at local agencies' drop-off sites where the home-grown produce can be shared with those in need.

Hugh Weathers, Commissioner of Agriculture, urges gardeners to buy their annuals, perennials, garden architecture, and other gardening needs at the three Spring Plant and Flower Festivals. "But," he said, "don't forget about plants for the vegetable garden and make sure to get enough to plant an extra row for the hungry. This is a great way to have fresh produce for your family, get a little exercise, and cultivate your passion for giving to others in need."

"If you don't have the greenest of thumbs, you can still help by donating non-perishable food or by making a cash donation," said Ryan Nevius, President of Richland County Master Gardener's Association and Plant-A-Row coordinator. Churches, businesses and other community groups are also encouraged to conduct pledge drives. Harvest Hope turns every dollar donated into 10 pounds of food.

South Carolina Cooks!

Spring in South Carolina is my favorite season for many reasons. Longer days, more outdoor activities, just seeing things 'green up'. Daylight saving time moved up a few weeks gives us more time outside to do the things we enjoy.

A highlight of this season for many is our annual Spring Plant and Flower Festivals at the three farmers markets across the state. They are always a hit and folks really turn out for them. I encourage you to come join us! There is something for everyone at the Plant and Flower festivals. We have listed the dates and times in this issue of the Bulletin or you can visit www.agriculture.sc.gov for more information.

Another rite of spring is the Charleston Food and Wine Festival in March. For the second year the Department sponsored a cooking contest at the festival. At this year's competition, sixteen local and celebrity chefs representing some of the restaurants participating in Fresh on the Menu Program used Certified SC Grown "secret ingredients" to create gourmet delicacies. This year's secret ingredients were goat cheese from Split Creek Farms in Anderson, local clams from Crosby Seafood, quail from Manchester Farms, and peanuts from Cromer's Peanuts. I have to tell you I was impressed watching the teams take a mystery ingredient and within 30 minutes whip up several dishes for the judges. Everything looked and smelled wonderful. Unfortunately, I didn't get a chance to taste any of their dishes.

In addition to the exhibitors on hand selling a wide variety of plants needed to make any yard the envy of the neighborhood, there will also be a booth for Clemson Extension's Master Gardeners to answer gardening questions. The Plant and Flower Festival is a great place for the novice or experienced gardener. Columbia's festival will be held, rain or shine, in Shed 14 at the Farmers Market.
The Pee Dee Market will hold its Southern Plant and Flower Festival in Florence from April 16-19. The hours for that festival are 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. and noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday. The Piedmont Plant and Flower Festival will be held at the Greenville State Farmers Market April 30 through May 3. The hours are 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Thursday through Saturday and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Sunday.

Plant-A-Row for the Hungry, started by the Garden Writer’s Association in 1995, has become a national drive that has collected approximately 12 million pounds of vegetables across the nation.
For details about the Plant-A-Row for the Hungry campaign and drop-off sites or to pledge online, visit www.harvesthope.org. Master Gardener Associations will have information about the effort available at the Spring Plant and Flower Festivals at the Columbia, Greenville, and Pee Dee State Farmers Markets in April. Visit www.agriculture.sc.gov for the dates and times of the festivals.
Planting vegetables is a thrifty and smart choice for gardeners and makes a big difference for those in need.
For more information or to make a pledge, contact Ryan Nevius, 803-381-8747, crestwoodsc@gmail.com.

South Carolina Cooks!

The audience took an active role, judging each team on how well they worked together, interacted with the crowd and completed their dishes within the allotted time. The audience voted on their favorite team by holding up a colored panel. A distinguished panel of four judges critiqued each team's dish based on taste, presentation and flavor/texture.

Richard Blais, celebrity chef and contestant from the Bravo TV show, Top Chef, was our emcee for the afternoon. He did a great job getting the crowd involved. Richard really took his cue to pound home to the audience each time what Certified SC Grown was all about. Getting more locally produced food into our meals. A couple of Charleston television stations gave great coverage. The sound bite from my interview was that when farmers and consumers are brought closer together, everybody wins!

In addition to some great food and good fun, we had a chance to meet many people interested in eating local and serving local foods in their restaurants. The owners of JB's Smokehouse on John's Island stopped by for the cooking competition. They have been serving local foods in their restaurants for years, and now they are joining the Fresh on the Menu program. Already, nearly 160 restaurants across the state have joined the program, identifying Certified SC Grown produce and products on their menus. It's exciting to see more joining all the time. Make sure your favorite restaurant has joined or at least is aware of the program.

Steven Odom, from Manchester Farms in Dalzell, was also in the audience Saturday during the cooking demonstration using quail as the secret ingredient. His quail was featured in the second round and garnered rave reviews from the chefs. It's great to have a producer stand up and be recognized.

One thing these artisan chefs demonstrated in addition to their culinary craft is that you can be creative with the diverse array of Certified SC Grown produce and products. They also showed that mealtimes can be fun and not just another chore. If you and your family know your way around the kitchen (including the sink), cooking together can be a great opportunity to discover how to eat healthy, share the load of meal preparation and clean up, learn new culinary skills together, have fun, and, most of all, communicate with each other.

I encourage you to have your own Certified SC Grown night at home. A little competition would add some fun. With Certified SC Grown, South Carolina cooks!

Weathers receives Top National FFA Award

Krista McCuen (left), Flint Holbrook, Frank Saldana, Adam Gore, Commissioner Weathers, Matthew Adams, Will Amick and Caroline Sherard

individuals from throughout the nation for their support and promotion of the FFA at the local, state, regional and national levels. The Honorary American FFA Degree is the highest award presented by the national agricultural education student group to friends and supporters. In addition to serving as the Commissioner of Agriculture, Weathers is also a fourth-generation dairy farmer from Bowman, SC.

"Commissioner Weathers is a dedicated and influential advocate of the FFA and all other agricultural education programs in our secondary schools, community colleges and Clemson University," said John W. Parris, state director of public affairs with the SC FFA organization, who nominated the commissioner for the national award.

The mission of the FFA is to make a positive difference in the lives of students by developing their potential for premier leadership, personal growth and career success through agricultural education.

South Carolina Cattlemen announce new "AG tag"

The South Carolina Cattlemen's Association and the South Carolina Cattlemen's Foundation are pleased to announce a new specialty license plate in South Carolina for cars, light trucks, and SUV's. This is the first specialty plate available from the South Carolina Department of Motor Vehicles geared toward anyone who wants to show their pride in South Carolina agriculture.

This tag is available to anyone in the state of South Carolina and costs $30 in addition to regular plate fees for vehicles. All of the money raised goes to the South Carolina Cattlemen's Foundation to enhance the scholarship program, as well as to be able to help fund research relating to the cattle industry with funds generated from the tags sale.

"We encourage you in the South Carolina Cattlemen's Association to 'brand one of your rides' and show your pride in our industry," said Mack Beatty with the South Carolina Cattlemen's Association. "Show your neighbors and encourage folks you do business with to brand their ride too."

Beatty added by putting the new license tag on a car, it is an ideal way for people that are not members of our organizations to be able to help support agriculture. For more information please contact your local South Carolina Department of Motor Vehicles office or check online at www.scdmvonline.com.

USDA Rural Development Renewable Energy and Energy Efficiency Improvements Grant Workshop forAgricultural Producers & Rural Small Businesses

Section 9007 of the 2008 Farm Bill provided continued funding for a program that is available to agricultural producers and rural small businesses in South Carolina who need to reduce their energy consumption and/or create renewable energy. These grants can pay for up to 25% of the cost of doing energy efficiency improvements to a facility, building, or a process within the agricultural operation. The maximum grant amount is $250,000 and the minimum is $1,500. Assistance is also available for the production or installation of a renewable energy source with a $500,000 maximum grant. Applications can be filed at any time but the awardees are not usually selected until September.

USDA, Rural Development, South Carolina will be holding workshops at the sites listed below to discuss the Rural Energy for America Program (REAP) and provide application assistance. Do your greenhouse coverings need replacement? Are your grain dryers old and inefficient? Are your diesel motors getting too expensive to operate? If these questions have you interested in our program, we invite you to attend our GRANT WORKSHOP to learn more about our program. Please use the contact information below to confirm your attendance for your respective area, or contact Mayra Felix Diaz at 803-253-3183.
